In-House Aircraft Maintenance Professional

Ontario, CA January 18, 2017 -- Certified Aviation Services, LLC (CAS) congratulates Chris Solomon for receiving the Next Gen Award by AMT (Aircraft Maintenance Technology) magazine. Mr. Solomon was awarded as one of the top 40 individuals in Aircraft Maintenance under the age of 40.

Chris Solomon holds the title of CAS Components Director of Operations in Fairhope, AL. Since 2012, he has been employed by Certified Aviation Services with the main focus of maintaining the flow of work and ensuring the quality and turn-around-time provided exceeds the customer's needs. Chris Solomon's main goal is to be instrumental in making CAS Components the most cost-effective and timely solution for all of its industry partners, while maintaining the highest level of safety culture and awareness possible at a Part 145 repair station. In addition to operations, Mr. Solomon also serves as a part-time instructor at Enterprise State Community College in Mobile.

"We are very excited that Chris is being recognized for his accomplishments, what he gives back to CAS and to the aviation community. Chris has always been one of those guys that can be counted on in any situation. He has been the cornerstone of CAS' Component Repair Operations and has been a big part of why airlines are turning to CAS. I'm also very proud of how Chris gives back to the aviation community as an instructor and as a leader with his involvement with the Southwest Alabama Workforce Development Council." Says Brad Caban, President of Certified Aviation Services, LLC.
